Beware of fake message disguised as courier

Consultation case

Increasingly, fake out-of-office notifications are sent via SNS under the guise of a courier.

Case 1

When I accessed the URL described in the out-of-office notification and installed the APP, a fake message with the same content was automatically sent from my smartphone to many destinations and I was charged a communication fee.

Case 2

The ID, Password, PIN, authentication code etc. entered on the fake site you accessed were misused for carrier payments(a service that allows you to pay the price together with the communication fee) by mobile companies, and you were billed without your knowledge.

Advise

- Even if you receive an out-of-office notification via SNS or e-mail, do not access the URL provided.
- If you receive an out-of-office notice that you do not remember, check with the service center of the courier company or check if there is a warning posted on the homepage.
