Notice

Be careful of heat shock!

Heat shock is when a sudden change in temperature causes blood pressure to rise or fall, and results in illnesses such as myocardial infarction, cerebral hemorrhage, or cerebral infarction.

It is said that as many as 19,000 people die every year while taking a bath nationwide. It is more likely to occur when there is a temperature difference of 10°C or more between a room with heating and not heating, and is more common in the elderly and people with chronic diseases such as high blood pressure and diabetes.

Blood Pressure Changes

Be careful with these things!

- ☒ Try to not make temperature differences between rooms, for example, warming the changing room before taking a bath.
- ☒ Do not take a bath immediately after drinking or eating.
- ☒ Set the temperature of the water in the bath to 41°C or lower.
- ☒ Do not spend more than 10 minutes in the bathtub.
- ☒ Stand up slowly when getting out of the bathtub.
